

The Lazalere House was owned by Nicholas Lazalere in 1877. Nicholas Lazalere has surfaced in Commissioner Minute ~~Books~~ as contributing the labor to excavate cellar and foundation of new jail (Commissioner Minute Book p. 232, 1870). The house he owned in Elk Neck primarily dates from the mid 19th century but does appear to have an earlier ^{SINGLE} story log wing. This sequence seems very plausible in the light of earlier settlement houses with a later frame expansion when money and need coincided.

DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The Lazalere House c. 1840-1860 is a 2½ story frame house on Old Elk Road a mile south of Jones Chapel. The house is peached on a small rise and faces east with the main gable running north/south.

The house appears to have been built in two separate sections. The large main frame block may have attached an existing 1½ story log structure that presently serves as a kitchen. An interior investigation was not permitted so definite conclusions could not be drawn about the age or construction sequence of the house.

The large frame block is 4 bays across by one room deep and rests on an uncoursed fieldstone foundation. The exterior covering is partially tar paper over old weatherboards. The structure is covered with a medium sloped tar paper roof. A 20th century shed porch with rounded corner stretch around the east and north sides. The window and door arrangements seem to have been altered with a additional door in either of the central bays. The sash is 6/6 with molded trim and some 2 panel shutters remain. Interior end stacks are found in each end although the northern stack has disappeared above the roof. 4 pane attic windows flank the stack.

The 1½ story log section rests on a fieldstone basement and is covered with weatherboard siding. The roof is of a medium pitch and covered with tar paper. Shed porch additions are found on both east and west sides. The main facade has an entrance in the northern of two bays with a 6/6 sash to the south. The south gable end has a single 3/6 sash on the first floor and a plain bargeboard closes the gable end. The west side is primarily covered with the shed porch. Two 4 pane floor lights illuminate the second floor. ~~However~~ Not too many farm structures have remained, however, a closed over brick lined well is found to the south of the log section. Other outbuildings have existed but were torn down in recent years.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

The Lazalere House was owned by Nicholas Lazalere in 1877. The house however, appears to date from before the map but it is not totally evident how much earlier it is. An interior investigation would definitely reveal these facts. The structure although somewhat sagging has retained most of its exterior character, and could possibly be an important structure in Elk Neck if someone was allowed to assess the interior's significance.

The Gustafson House (CE-811) seems to have developed in a similar way with a 1st story log section predating a larger 2nd story frame section. This sequence appears very plausible in the light of earlier settlement houses with a later frame expansion when the family needed more space. ~~Evidence of this could obviously be found with an interior investigation.~~
